Statement number: 5

A text set in a challenging environment has much to teach us, the readers, <sup>is a statement</sup> of which I agree to. Both ~~the poems 'I, too, sing America' and 'Still I Rise' by Langston Hughes and 'Still I Rise' by Maya Angelou~~ are poems that are written and set during a challenging time, a time <sup>where</sup> ~~where~~ African Americans faced oppression. Although both poems are written in different contexts, they unite through the desire to fight against social injustices. ~~The~~ Both poets <sup>create</sup> ~~provide~~ a historical lens which the readers can critique their own contexts <sup>social</sup> ~~social~~ injustices. Additionally both texts teach the readers about valuable social functions.

~~The context of a text can allow the reader to~~ <sup>A</sup> ~~can~~ teach the reader that despite the contexts there are always significant challenges that you are faced with. The poem 'I, too' was published in 1945, 10 years before the civil rights movement, a time <sup>when</sup> ~~when~~ many African Americans faced hardship <sup>and had minimal opportunities</sup>. Hughes wrote: "I am the darker brother... they send me to eat in the kitchen when company comes" The kitchen is not only representative of him being the help but is a metaphor of how the 'kitchen' is the margins of society where many African Americans, in the words of Hughes, are "sent to eat". ~~The~~ The table

Where many people eat has connotations of warmth, comfort, sharing, communication; <sup>compared</sup> ~~compared~~ with Hughes who is eating in the kitchen portraying <sup>connotations</sup> ~~a sense~~ of cold ~~and~~, 'separation and rejection'. In comparison, 'Still, rise' was published in 1978 ~~at~~ when the beginnings of the civil rights movement and feminist movement had changed American Society. In this challenging environment African American <sup>women</sup> had more opportunities than ever before. However, a social commentator at the time noted that: "All too often, 'black' was equated with black men, <sup>and</sup> ~~but~~ 'white' was equated with white women, as a result, black women were an <sup>invisible</sup> ~~group~~ group whose existence and needs were ignored." Despite this Angelou stood up and made sure her ~~existence~~ needs were not ignored. Angelou used rhetorical questions such as "Does my sassiness upset you?", "does my sexiness upset you?" and "does my haughtiness offend you?" Angelou was in a time period where she could dare to question the 'oppressor' directly. She had a voice which she could use to confront, whereas Hughes had no powerful voice. These texts which were set in a challenging environment are able to teach <sup>modern</sup> ~~the~~ day leaders that even if there has been progress in history there is still challenges you have to <sup>in new and</sup> ~~embrace~~ <sup>'improved'</sup> ~~face~~ <sup>contexts</sup>. These texts teach us that in order to have a 'successful' environment <sup>input of</sup> there needs to be continuous effort. ~~that is why~~

A text <sup>set</sup> in a challenging environment brings attention to the <sup>transcendent</sup> ~~and~~ universal social injustices present in the world today and ~~how to deal~~ <sup>encourages</sup> the reader to ~~to~~ think about the Social injustices present in their context. ~~to say~~ <sup>Context</sup> The ~~time~~ When Hughes wrote 'I, too, sing America' there were many significant social injustices, it was a time when there were limited ~~opportunities~~ employment opportunities for African Americans, many were employed as domestic help and it was not uncommon to be in an abusive ~~work~~ environment. In the poem, Hughes ~~wrote~~, began with 'I, too, <sup>sing</sup> ~~sing~~ America' and ends with "I, too, am America." This portrays that he, and ~~the~~ other African Americans, are not just merely participating in what <sup>makes</sup> ~~makes~~ one American but are now apart of their society. Similarly with 'Still I rise' Angelou is confronting her painful heritage of slavery and is able to move past it and grow stronger. This can be seen when ~~Angel~~ Angelou writes "out of the huts of history's shame, up from a past rooted in pain" and "leaving behind nights of terror and fear." ~~She~~ She is also importantly "bringing the gifts her ancestors gave" showcasing that ~~as~~ ~~at~~ ~~a~~ everyone has gifts they can bring despite the prejudices society has <sup>hounded</sup> ~~forced~~ ~~upon~~ ~~them~~ ~~with~~. ~~This challenging environment can be seen~~ Many people in the world today are still disconnected from society such as the Syrian and Rohingya refugees. There are also my citizens in their own countries who are marginalised ~~and~~ pushed to the fringes of society ~~such~~, Muslims in western countries for example. These challenging environments which the poems are set in are the contexts in which ~~the~~ ~~the~~ the poets lived. They are teaching us that social injustices are a universal and transcendent. They <sup>texts</sup> ~~text~~ provoke the reader to question who is marginalised in ~~the~~ the world currently and bring attention to social injustices they may have of their own.

A text set in a challenging environment promote and teach us valuable social functions. A valuable social function both poems present the reader with is <sup>a tone of</sup> "self worth." In the poem "I, too, sing America" ~~it is~~ it is written that "they'll see how beautiful I am." and similarly in "Still I rise" ~~it is~~ it is written that "does it come as a surprise that I dance like I've got ~~at~~ diamonds at the meeting of my thighs." Both poems are portraying a sense of self worth and, that they know they are beautiful and that the 'oppressor' should feel ashamed. "I, too, sing America" has portrays the valuable social function of hope. ~~as~~ ~~see~~ Hughes wrote "tomorrow I'll be at the table when company comes." ~~there~~ there is use of enjambement throughout from start to end of this poem; it goes from the kitchen to "tomorrow" to a "then" when the 'oppressors' will see how beautiful he is and feel ashamed. ~~At~~ This language feature shows there is hope for a forward ~~or~~ and leaving behind the past ~~for only one direction which there is no looking back~~; forward to a better, brighter and more equal future. Both the poems have the social function of ~~the~~ determination present. ~~At~~ ~~the~~ ~~story~~ ~~at~~ Hughes wrote "But I laugh, eat well and grow strong" showing that ~~society cannot~~ <sup>he cannot be</sup> weakened by society and he is determined to grow strong and sit at the table. ~~But~~ ~~at~~ Additionally, Angelou wrote "you may write me down in history with your bitter, twisted lies but still... like dust, I'll rise" This shows that no matter what adversity or hardship she is faced with she will rise above it. Angelou uses a repetition of "I rise" to again show her determination to to not be pushed down and oppressed. ~~Lastly both poems~~ ~~are written in a first person voice which shows the claiming~~ ~~of identity and~~ These valuable social functions teach us, the modern day readers, that we have to be hopeful and determined to overcome our adversities. Both poems are not resentful, bitter or <sup>intended for</sup> revenge ~~poet~~ which lead us to ~~just~~ think about our highest self and our valuable social functions.

~~Through contexts &~~ A text set in a challenging environment has much to teach us & is a statement of which ~~is~~ <sup>I</sup> fully agree with. The context in which a poem is written in teach us that even if there is progress in history there are still challenges you have to face in the new 'improved' context. ~~Added~~ ~~And in addition~~ ~~in addition~~ that social injustices are transcendent and universal ~~ideas~~ and can be seen in any context.
~~And finally~~ Lastly a text in a challenging environment teach us ~~that~~ about valuable social functions which we need in order to ~~over~~ fight against social injustices.

* Both texts use a first person voice which shows them claiming their identity and not accepting one that is <sup>forced</sup> ~~thrust~~ upon them.
